Did you know that June 20th is Take Your Dog to Work Day? Dogs in the workplace have been known to reduce stress and create a happier environment. Maybe your boss will let you bring your pup in too? You can share this link with your boss.

If you are allowed to bring your dog to work, take a picture, and share it with us! We will publish the pictures in the July newsletter. Send pictures as jpegs to mantha465@aol.com.

The American Red Cross has a pet first aid class. This class is filled with tons of life saving information that could help your pet. D Tails has not offered this class since 2011, but we are considering having it again. If you would be interested in taking the American Red Cross class for pets, please email mantha465@aol.com and let us know. This class would need to be held on a weekend, as it is four hours long. You can find more information about this class here:

<http://www.redcross.org/take-a-class/program-highlights/cpr-first-aid/wilderness-sports-pets#pet-first-aid>

In the meantime, it is always a good idea to have a pet first aid kit in your home and car, just in case. You can get pet first aid kits at most major pet retailers.

Please remember that friends don't leave furry friends in locked cars in the summer! It takes only minutes for a car to reach extreme temperatures, even with the windows cracked. If you see a dog in distress, get the make and license plate of the car, call 911, have someone go into the store, tell the manager and have them announce the information. Stay with the dog until help arrives.
